Several Phases Of Proposal Are Not Acceptable

WASHINGTON (UPI) -The Defense Department took its $1.4 billion military pay proposal to Capitol Hill Tuesday and was told immediately that Congress was going to change it all around.

Man may some day fly close to earth's nearest neighbor among the sun's family of planets. But the word from Mariner 2 is that he would not dare attempt to land

Its surface temperature, according to Mariner, is about 800 degrees fahrenheit. This is some 200 degrees hotter than the melting point of lead. For all anybody knows. Venus may be dotted with lakes of molten metal.

No life, as conceived on earth, could survive on the Venusian surface. The only possibility that living things may exist within miles of land on Venus lies in the chance that crude microscopic organisms might be able to subsist, from birth to death, in the cooler regions of the high Venusian atmosphere.

This is a theory only. No evidence has ever been found to support it. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) is, however, conducting balloon experiments to see if such life! exists in the earth's atmosphere.

If it does, future space probes will be asked to look for similar life in the gaseous envelopes around Venus and the other

CASTLEBAR, Ireland (AP)-The Mayo County Council suspects leprechauns in its fiscal

The council has just learned the county is taxing itself and paying the taxes to itself. This is the sort of thing those wee, tricky Irish fairies would dream up.

Moreover, the taxes are collected by a man the council pays to "This," fumed Councillor J. B. Leneghan, "is the daftest thing I ever heard of.'

The curious situation was brought to light at a council meeting. One of the 30 members questioned a tax bill against the county for $5,527.20. "To whom," asked Councillor

Space Probe Shows Venus Can't Support Life

Scientists Say Planet Is Hot, Dark

Man Could Not Survive Landing On Big Neighbor

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Outwardly lovely Venus actually is a dead dark desert hidden from the rest of the universe by clouds of oily smog.

This picture of the brightest of planets was pieced out Tuesday by scientists from millions of bits of information supplied by radio, radar, and the Mariner 2 space-

Man may some day fly close to earth's nearest neighbor among the sun's family of planets. But the word from Mariner 2 is that he would not dare attempt to land

Its surface temperature, according to Mariner, is about 800 degrees fahrenheit. This is some 200 degrees hotter than the melting point of lead. For all anybody knows, Venus may be dotted with lakes of molten metal.

No life, as conceived on earth, could survive on the Venusian surface. The only possibility that living things may exist within miles of land on Venus lies in the chance that crude microscopic organisms might be able to sub-sist, from birth to death, in the cooler regions of the high Venusian atmosphere.

This is a theory only. No evidence has ever been found to support it. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) is, however, conducting balloon experiments to see if such life exists in the earth's atmosphere. If it does, future space probes will be asked to look for similar the gaseous envelopes

Pancake Race Finish

Mrs. Mary Barrington leads the field to the finish line to win the 14th annual pancake race at Liberal, Kansas. The race is run in contest with the traditional Shrove Tuesday event in Olney, England. The score between the English and American cities is now tied at 7-7. Mrs. Barrington's time for the 415 yard twisting course through city streets was 1:05.6, bettering Olney's time of one minute ten seconds.

The council has just learned the county is taxing itself and paying the taxes to itself. This is the sort of thing those wee, tricky Irish fairies would dream up.

Moreover, the taxes are collected by a man the council pays to collect taxes. "This," fumed Councillor J. B.

Leneghan, "is the daftest thing I ever heard of. The curious situation was brought to light at a council meeting. One of the 30 members questioned a tax bill against the county for $5,527.20. "To whom," asked Councillor H. J. Kenny, "is it proposed to pay this sum?"

"We were able to maintain the circulation down to the ankle. but the bottom of the sole and the toes had lost their circulation." said Dr. Oscar Camp, a specialist in vascular surgery.

"It then became a matter of amputating through the ankle or at the original incision. Prosthetic devices work better from below the knee, rather than the ankle. so it will be done that way.

Arnold, 32 - year - old television technician, was cutting logs outside his home at Savage in nearby Howard County Feb. 10 when the accident happened. The power saw fell from its support, severing his right leg at mid-calf.

Though suffering from pain and shock, Arnold took his belt from around his waist and tied it around the bleeding stump. Dr. Camp said later this undoubtedly saved his life.

Dr. Camp and two resident surgeons at Franklin Square Hospital worked 71/2 hours painstakingly joining the leg to the stump.

The bill, offered by Rep. Samuel N. Friedel, D-Md., now goes to the senate.

Houses in Maryland are often sold subject to ground rent, an obligation assumed by the home buyer to pay a fixed amount a year to the land owner. From 1921 until 1961, the IRS regulations treated ground rents as morgages in every respect and the annual 205 NORTH MECHANIC ST. rents were deductible as interest by the home buyer.

Are They Dropouts Or 'Pushouts'?

Sociologists and others interested in the problem of high school students leaving their studies before graduation to begin working, should ask not why they are dropouts but who

In many cases it is not that the student loses interest and quits, but a teacher loses interest in instructing students he may feel have no college aptitude. With many modern high schools directing their scholastic programs toward college preparation, such an attitude on the part of a teacher foredooms graduation for

A theory on school pushouts coming from a layman would probably evoke strong rebuttals from the teaching profession. But Dr. Daniel Schreiber is not a layman. He is director of Project School Dropouts for the National Education Association.

Dr. Schreiber has discovered that about one of every three high school students quits school before graduation, and 90 per cent of juvenile delinquents and two-thirds of unemployed youths belong to the one-third who never complete high school.

That there is a connection between education, work opportunities and crime should be obvious. In some countries, perhaps, a ninth grade education would be prized. But in the United States it qualifies a youth for little more than a laboring job, and this type of occupation is rapidly on the wane as a result of automation.

Devoting a portion of high school curricula to college preparatory training is a necessity in a technologically advanced society, but it should not preclude the first and primary goal of any high school: a 12th grade education and a diploma. No teacher has the right to deny a student his diploma because he possesses neither the talent nor the desire for formal education beyond the high school level.

Crazy Like A Fox

Whether there will be a new labor crisis in steel his coming Spring is a question. But as the leaders of the United Steelworkers union mull chances for wringing new concessions from the steel companies, they must be reflecting on a queer irony: Roger Blough, who was a scorned and derided figure last year when he was forced to back down on the matter of a price rise, now looms up as a farsighted man. He has made it tough for the steel union to make out a plausible case for any hefty increases in wages or benefits for 1963.

Even Mr. Blough's conservative friends were guilty of kicking him a year ago after President Kennedy had told him off. They talked pityingly about his "blunder" in public relations, his poor sense of "timing." "Roger Blah of U. S. Puttty" was the phrase that William Buckley's conservative National Review pinned on him for alleged pusillanimity in failing to stand up in the face of Kennedy's withering blast.

It seemed to cross nobody's mind during the furore and hullabaloo that maybe Mr. Blough, in establishing the point that the steel industry needed profits in order to keep its plant up to snuff, was putting his company and his industry in a good bargaining position for future crises in labor relations. My own impression of Roger Blough, gained from past journalistic encounters with him, is that he is a cutie, a "phony hick" in the description which Arthur Krock once applied to a writer who pretended to a wide-eyed innocence in order to lure people into boastful confession. Not so long ago I went to see Mr. Blough on an assignment: I was supposed to find out what the United States Steel Corporation was doing to combat the workings of Parkinson's Law of bureaucratic "empire building" as it applied to ambitious department heads in the steel business. I got no good answers to my questions for the very good reason that Mr. Blough had no intention of admitting that there was any departmental featherbedding in U. S. Steel to counteract. Mr. Blough was a shrewd man, all right; before the interview was over he was trying to interest me in a story about the inequities of Minnesota State tax law as it applied to the mining of iron ore on the Mesabi Range.

Since Mr. Blough knows his own industry, he could not have been really sanguine last April that a price rise could have been made to stick for very long. No business that is operating a good deal short of capacity will refuse to shade its prices in order to attract

When machinery is standing idle, the stated - or "administered" - price is one thing, and the actual price at the moment of dealing is another. Mr. Blough is just as much aware of this rule of competition as

So the scheduled steel prices would probably have been broken even if President Kennedy had kept a civil tongue in his head. Nevertheless, the gesture on the part of U. S. Steel. Bethlehem and other companies was worth the making. In the first place, it succeeded in calling wide attention to the fact that industry must find some valid method of financing the modernization of decrepit manufacturing facilities. Once he had turned thumbs down on higher steel prices, President Kennedy could hardly refuse to listen to the corporations' plea for a more lenient depreciation policy, and some ultimate relief from the 52 percent tax on corporate profits.

Beyond this, Mr. Blough accomplished another thing: he put the United Steelworkers union in a bad position to ask for a big wage increase this year or next. Should the Kennedy Administration seem about to sanction a general wage increase in steel for 1963 or 1964, it would certainly be assailed with loud cries of favoritism. When Kennedy refused to countenance a rise in steel prices, he based his decision on a general stand against inflation. He can hardly shift his ground this year without risking the charge of inconsistency, mental dishonesty, and craven truckling to the labor vote. And it is no less a person than Roger Blough who has managed to tie the President's hands.

A yokel, this Roger Blough? Would that you and I could be so clever.

Payola-Probing Congressman Now Investigating Power Line Control

WASHINGTON-Rep. Oren Harris, D.-Ark., is the man who once made headlines investigating radio payola, the $64,000 Question, Charles Van Doren and various victims of Madison Avenue's imagination. The public was flabbergasted. It had been fooled. Harris was on the front pages for weeks. Today the gentleman from Arkansas will investigate something which will not make the front pages, but will hit the public pocketbook to the tune of millions, whereas radio-TV payola cost the public nothing except the knowledge that it had been hoodwinked.

Harris will dig into the question of high-velocity transmission lines which can carry power long distances from the mine mouth in West Virginia where coal is a glut on the market to downtown New York where Consolidated Edison now burns coal hauled long, laborious miles from the mine mouth.

Or these long transmission lines can carry power from the flooded waters of the northwest when water is high and power is wasted, a thousand miles to California at a time when its rivers are dry and power is scarce.

The saving could rid cities of air pollution and transfer the industry pattern of the entire United States.

This new technique of long distance power was first developed in the Soviet Union which has to get around the problem of long distances between remote Siberian power dams and populated industrial centers.

It has not yet been used in the United States, but the battle is now on as to who will control and regulate these long lines-the government or the big utilities. Pavola And Public Power

Sen. Clair Engle and Rep. John Moss, both of California and both public-power Democrats, have introduced a bill requiring these high voltage lines to be certified by the Federal Power Commission. In other words, the FPC would decide whether each long transmission line would be publicowned or private-owned, whether they must carry both public and private just as a toll highway carries any and all kinds of

Chairman Joe Swidler, a Kennedy appointee to the Power Commission, actually drafted the bill for Engle and Moss, but later got "chicken" and backed away from it. He didn't want the Power Commission to get mixed up in regulations. Vice Chairman Howard Morgan, another Kennedy appointee, vigorously supports the Engle-Moss idea that high tension lines should not be built without federal certification.

Morgan has written President Kennedy that he will not accept reappointment on the Power Commission. He claims the commission is industry dominated. Morgan will be the lead-off witness before Chairman Harris and his commerce committee. Swidler will follow him. How Chairman Harris handles this technical but dynamite-laden subject will be interesting. Oren is not a corn-pone congressman. He is one of the most industryminded members of Congress, author of the Harris-Fulbright natural gas bill which Eisenhower finally vetoed, has passed legislation aiding the railroads and the big airlines, is a friend of Arkansas Power and Light. Ham Moses of that firm once presented Mrs. Harris with nylon stockings in the war days when they were

But there is one interesting thing the non-pone Congressman from Arkansas and the anti-monopoly vice chairman from Oregon have in common; they both believe the gas industry should be let alone. Morgan came to that conclusion because prices under Ike's old FPC Chairman Jerome Kuykendall were raised so high that gas has been developed all over the place and is almost a glut on the market. Competitive gas prices are regulating themselves. Merry-Go-Round family. It is composed of professional detractors. One day recently, I walked into my brother John's house wearing a Tyrolean velour hat with a feather in it. He extended his hand and said: "Hello, Jim. Where's your bow and arrow?"

My mother believed that writing was nothing more than a nutty hobby. When I finished a book, she said: "Well, son. If this one doesn't sell will you go out and look for a job?" I was 45 years of age and she was still giving me notes to hand to the grocer.

Last spring, I bought a gold watch for my father in Hong Kong. It had a Swiss movement. It was priced so reasonably that my wife and I walked in and out of the shop on Cameroon Road three times before we put up the money. We brought it home in a plush case. When my father saw it, he shook his head in wonderment.

"Beautiful," he said. "It's the most beautiful watch I've ever seen." It was something to look at. There were thirty jewels, and the watch not only told the time of day, it also told the day of the week and the date of the month. It looked like an alarm clock on his wrist.

"You can't use two watches," my brother John said. "Can I have the old one?" My father shook his head. "It didn't take you long to figure that out, did it? he said. Johnny got the old watch. That turnip only told time. The new one did everything but cook the breakfast. 'Now," my father said, "let me get one thing straight. This thing not only tells time, it also gives me the day of the week and the date. Suppose I forget to wind it?" Well, I said, there must be some way of adjusting it. "Okay," he said. "How?"

I took the watch, pulled the stem out a little, and turned it. Nothing happened. I pushed it all the way in and turned. Nothing happened. "Here," he said. "Give it to me before you break it." He took it and gave the winder a few turns and, in a moment, it was giving us the wrong day, the wrong date, and the wrong time.

My father began to study Johnny as though he was going to ask for his old watch back. We fiddled with the new watch for an hour, and finally got it to tell the

This, of course, is a mad Irish matter how hard we tried. When we got it to show Wednesday, it gave the date as the 14th. When we got the date right, the day was Monday.

The watch lacked imagination. Also a calendar. My father fooled with the thing a few days, and finally got the right date, the right day, and the right time, except for one thing. The watch was busted. So he brought it to Nick Napoli's jewelry store and said: "Nick. Fix this thing, will you? I'll wait."

Napoli took a look and said: "If you're going to wait, you're going to be here a long time. I don't think I ever saw this make of watch before." My father said his son had picked it up in Hong Kong. Napoli nodded, "We may have to send it back there to fix it," he said.

The jeweler sent it to New York. New York sent to Switzerland for a new part. The new part took time. Weeks went by. My father was watchless. Every time he passed my brother he said: "How's the old turnip doing?" Fine, Johnny said. Just dandy.

The watch came back and it told the correct time, the day of the week, and the date. "This thing is okay," my father said, "if nobody touches it. One touch and it's out of business." So all he did was wind it. He said it's the only watch in the world which requires 80 winds each morning and still

One night he found the watch slow, so he moved it ahead to a point after midnight. At once the day and the date changed, and now he had the right time, but the watch was on tomorrow. He began to glare at me and mutter under his breath. We tried to get it back on the rails, but when we got the correct day and date, the hour was wrong. So it went back to Napoli. He tried. The stem winder was bent. The watch was sent to New York, and then to Switzerland and, weeks later, it was back on my father's wrist.

Everything is fine right now. My father shows it to his friends with a little scorn. "Wanna see my Chinese watch?" he say. "It tells Chinese time.'

I don't mind. But I think I'll avoid him for the next week or so. I just looked at the calendar and February has only 28 days. On the first of March, his watch is going to read "Friday" "Feb. 29th.". . .

How Far Does Labor-Management Parallel Go?

WASHINGTON-President Kennedy may think he evened things up when he denounced the "irresponsibility" of Bertram Powers, head of the printers' union, in New York City's newspaper strike. It will be recalled that, when Mr. Kennedy assailed Roger Blough and the steel executives in April 1962 as defying the "public interest," many critics said he would never undertake to give equal treatment to a labor executive. But how far does the paral-

The President convened a federal grand jury and used the contracting power of the Defense Department as a means of coercing steel executives not to go along with the proposed price increase. Will Mr. Kennedy attempt to do anything at all in the legislative or judicial field against a laborunion monopoly that endeavors to fix wage costs in a metropolitan area and set the pattern for other cities in the country? The Department of Justice could certainly investigate what has happened in the New York newspaper strike. The President could press for a law that would prohibit labor-union monopolies, just as industrial monopolies and price-fixing are forbidden. If Congress passed such a law, it would then really "even things up." The labor-monopoly scandal has not been acted on for several reasons. One is that politicians are afraid of the labor vote. They ignore, however, the non-labor vote-the large number of victims who would rise to support a President or a Congress that sincerely believed in "equal rights." Another reason is that the American people have not been given the facts. A comprehensive investigation by a congressional committee is needed to tell the people they are living under a labor-union dictatorship which depends on tactics of violence and intimidation to keep workers from crossing a picket line.

By David Lawrence

Why should a group of laborunion leaders in an industry be able to close down all the plants and factories while the American people are deprived of needed goods and services? Why should a national labor union be permitted to use a $17,000,000-a-year strike fund to enable printers to collect total benefith of $115 a week from all sources while other strikers in weaker unions cannot resume work and have to subsist on unemployment compensation

Every individual has a right to work or to refrain from work. But no two individuals have a basic right to conspire together with others to bring about a work stoppage and consequent economic loss to other citizens. The Constitution, under the commerce clause, gives Congress the right to legislate on the subject.

Labor leaders will not like such suggestions, but, if these leaders are realistic, they will perceive that perhaps labor-union dictatorships have seen their heyday in America. Either the government will step in with restrictive laws or else Congress will be compelled to set up a government-controlled economy. Few will like it, but this formula is the lesser of two evils. For the free-enterprise system cannot survive under labor-union monopolies-nor can labor unions be permitted to run the country

President Kennedy has pointed up the dangers. He said in a prepared statement read at his news conference last week:

"The New York newspaper

Are They Dropouts Or 'Pushouts'?

Sociologists and others interested in the problem of high school students leaving their studies before graduation to begin working. should ask not why they are dropouts but who pushed them.

In many cases it is not that the student loses interest and quits, but a teacher loses interest in instructing students he may feel have no college aptitude. With many modern high schools directing their scholastic programs toward college preparation, such an attitude on the part of a teacher foredooms graduation for the student.

A theory on school pushouts coming from a layman would probably evoke strong rebuttals from the teaching profession. But Dr. Daniel Schreiber is not a layman. He is director of Project School Dropouts for the National Education Association.

Dr. Schreiber has discovered that about one of every three high school students quits school before graduation, and 90 per cent of juvenile delinquents and two-thirds of unemployed youths belong to the one-third who never complete high school.

That there is a connection between education, work opportunities and crime should be obvious. In some countries, perhaps, a ninth grade education would be prized. But in the United States it qualifies a youth for little more than a laboring job, and this type of occupation is rapidly on the wane as a result of automation.

Devoting a portion of high school curricula to college preparatory training is a necessity in a technologically advanced society, but it should not preclude the first and primary goal of any high school: a 12th grade education and a diploma. No teacher has the right to deny a student his diploma because he possesses neither the talent nor the desire for formal education beyond the high school level.

Crazy Like A Fox

Whether there will be a new labor crisis in steel this coming Spring is a question. But as the leaders of the United Steelworkers union mull over their chances for wringing new concessions from the steel companies, they must be reflecting on a queer irony: Roger Blough, who was a scorned and derided figure last year when he was forced to back down on the matter of a price rise, now looms up as a farsighted man. He has made it tough for the steel union to make out a plausible case for any hefty increases in wages or benefits for 1963.

Even Mr. Blough's conservative friends were guilty of kicking him a year ago after President Kennedy had told him off. They talked pityingly about his "blunder" in public relations, his poor sense of "timing." "Roger Blah of U. S. Puttty" was the phrase that William Buckley's conservative National Review pinned on him for alleged pusillanimity in failing to stand up in the face of Kennedy's withering blast.

It seemed to cross nobody's mind during the furore and hullabaloo that maybe Mr. Blough, in establishing the point that the steel industry needed profits in order to keep its plant up to snuff, was putting his company and his industry in a good bargaining position for future crises in labor relations. My own impression of Roger Blough, gained from past journalistic encounters with him, is that he is a cutie, a "phony hick" in the description which Arthur Krock once applied to a writer who pretended to a wide-eyed innocence in order to lure people into boastful confession. Not so long ago I went to see Mr. Blough on an assignment: I was supposed to find out what the United States Steel Corporation was doing to combat the workings of Parkinson's Law of bureaucratic "empire building" as it applied to ambitious department heads in the steel business. I got no good answers to my questions for the very good reason that Mr. Blough had no intention of admitting that there was any departmental featherbedding in U. S. Steel to counteract. Mr. Blough was a shrewd man, all right; before the interview was over he was trying to interest me in a story about the inequities of Minnesota State tax law as it applied to the mining of iron ore on the Mesabi Range.

Since Mr. Blough knows his own industry, he could not have been really sanguine last April that a price rise could have been made to stick for very long. No business that is operating a good deal short of capacity will refuse to shade its prices in order to attract

When machinery is standing idle, the stated - or "administered" - price is one thing, and the actual price at the moment of dealing is another. Mr. Blough is just as much aware of this rule of competition as any man alive.

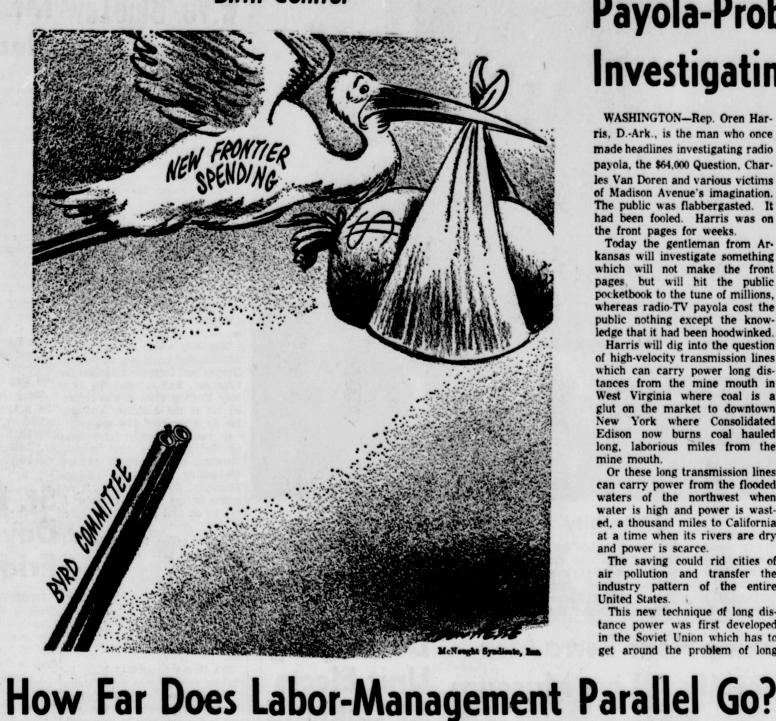

So the scheduled steel prices would probably have been broken even if President Kennedy had kept a civil tongue in his head. Nevertheless, the gesture on the part of U. S. Steel. Bethlehem and other companies was worth the making. In the first place, it succeeded in calling wide attention to the fact that industry must find some valid method of financing the modernization of decrepit manufacturing facilities. Once he had turned thumbs down on higher steel prices, President Kennedy could hardly refuse to listen to the corporations' plea for a more lenient depreciation policy, and some ultimate relief from the 52 percent tax on corporate profits.

Beyond this, Mr. Blough accomplished another thing: he put the United Steelworkers union in a bad position to ask for a big wage increase this year or next. Should the Kennedy Administration seem about to sanction a general wage increase in steel for 1963 or 1964, it would certainly be assailed with loud cries of favoritism. When Kennedy refused to countenance a rise in steel prices, he based his decision on a general stand against inflation. He can hardly shift his ground this year without risking the charge of inconsistency, mental dishonesty, and craven truckling to the labor vote. And it is no less a person than Roger Blough who has managed to tie the President's made headlines investigating radio payola, the $64,000 Question, Charles Van Doren and various victims of Madison Avenue's imagination. The public was flabbergasted. It had been fooled. Harris was on the front pages for weeks.

Today the gentleman from Arkansas will investigate something which will not make the front pages, but will hit the public pocketbook to the tune of millions, whereas radio-TV payola cost the public nothing except the knowledge that it had been hoodwinked.

Harris will dig into the question of high-velocity transmission lines which can carry power long distances from the mine mouth in West Virginia where coal is a glut on the market to downtown New York where Consolidated Edison now burns coal hauled long, laborious miles from the mine mouth.

Or these long transmission lines can carry power from the flooded waters of the northwest when water is high and power is wasted, a thousand miles to California at a time when its rivers are dry and power is scarce.

The saving could rid cities of air pollution and transfer the industry pattern of the entire United States.

This new technique of long distance power was first developed in the Soviet Union which has to get around the problem of long distances between remote Siberian power dams and populated industrial centers. It has not yet been used in the United States, but the battle is now on as to who will control and regulate these long lines-the government or the big utilities.

Payola And Public Power Sen. Clair Engle and Rep. John Moss, both of California and both public-power Democrats, have introduced a bill requiring these high voltage lines to be certified by the Federal Power Commission. In other words, the FPC would decide whether each long transmission line would be publicowned or private-owned, whether they must carry both public and private just as a toll highway carries any and all kinds of traffic.

Chairman Joe Swidler, a Kennedy appointee to the Power Commission, actually drafted the bill for Engle and Moss. but later got 'chicken' and backed away from it. He didn't want the Power Commission to get mixed up in regulations. Vice Chairman Howard Morgan, another Kennedy appointee, vigorously supports the Engle-Moss idea that high tension lines should not be built without federal certification. Morgan has written President Kennedy that he will not accept reappointment on the Power Commission He claims the commission is industry dominated. Morgan will be the lead-off witness before Chairman Harris and his commerce committee. Swidler will follow him. How Chairman Harris handles this technical but dynamite-laden subject will be interesting. This, of course, is a mad Irish family. It is composed of professional detractors. One day recently, I walked into my brother John's house wearing a Tyrolean velour hat with a feather in it. He extended his hand and said: 'Hello, Jim. Where's your bow and arrow?" My mother believed that writing was nothing more than a nutty hobby. When I finished a book.

she said: "Well, son. If this one doesn't sell will you go out and look for a job?" I was 45 years of age and she was still giving me notes to hand to the grocer. Last spring, I bought a gold watch for my father in Hong Kong. It had a Swiss movement. It was priced so reasonably that my wife and I walked in and out of the shop on Cameroon Road three times before we put up the money. We brought it home in a plush case. When my father saw it, he shook his head in wonderment.

"Beautiful," he said. "It's the most beautiful watch I've ever seen." It was something to look at. There were thirty jewels, and the watch not only told the time of day, it also told the day of the week and the date of the month. It looked like an alarm clock on his wrist.

"You can't use two watches," my brother John said. "Can I have the old one?" My father shook his head. "It didn't take you long to figure that out, did it?' he said. Johnny got the old watch. That turnip only told time. The new one did everything but cook

the breakfast. "Now," my father said, "let me get one thing straight. This thing not only tells time, it also gives me the day of the week and the date. Suppose I forget to wind it?" Well, I said, there must be some way of adjusting it. "Okay," he said. "How?" I took the watch, pulled the stem out a little, and turned it. Nothing happened. I pushed it all the way in and turned. Nothing happened. "Here," he said. "Give it to me before you break it." He took it and gave the winder a few turns and, in a moment, it was giving us the wrong day, the matter how hard we tried. When we got it to show Wednesday, it gave the date as the 14th. When we got the date right, the day was Monday.

The watch lacked imagination. Also a calendar. My father fooled with the thing a few days, and finally got the right date, the right day, and the right time, except for one thing. The watch was busted. So he brought it to Nick Napoli's jewelry store and said: "Nick. Fix this thing, will you? I'll wait." Napoli took a look and said: "If you're going to wait, you're going to be here a long time. I don't think I ever saw this make of watch before." My father said his son had picked it up in Hong Kong. Napoli nodded, "We may have to send it back there to fix it." he said. The jeweler sent it to New York. New York sent to Switzerland for a new part. The new part took time. Weeks went by. My father was watchless. Every time he passed my brother he said: "How's the old turnip doing?"

Fine, Johnny said. Just dandy. The watch came back and it told the correct time, the day of the week, and the date. "This thing is okay," my father said, "if nobody touches it. One touch and it's out of business." So all he did was wind it. He said it's the only watch in the world which requires 80 winds each morning and still feels loose. One night he found the watch slow, so he moved it ahead to a point after midnight. At once the day and the date changed, and now he had the right time, but the watch was on tomorrow. He began to glare at me and mutter under his breath. We tried to get it back on the rails, but when we got the correct day and date, the hour was wrong. So it went back to Napoli. He tried. The stem winder was bent. The watch was sent to New York, and then to

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE - Here's how to work it: AXYDLBAAXR IS LONGFELLOW

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Zimmer Will Revise Budget For College

Second Session Planned Thursday

A discussion of the proposed budget for Allegany Community College for the fiscal year starting July 1 featured a meeting of the County Board of Education, sitting yesterday afternoon as the Board of Trustees of the college. Dr. Robert S. Zimmer, president of the college, submitted a proposed budget based on an enrollment of the equivalent of 200 full-time students for the 1963-64 school year. The president was advised by the Board of Trustees to revise his estimates on the basis of 130 full-time students and 150 parttime students for 1963-64.

The Board of Trustees will meet again at 7:30 p. m. Thursday at the college to consider Dr. Zimmer's revised budget for the college. It is anticipated that the total budget will be in the neighborhood of $160,000 and the county will be requested to provide somewhere between $70,000 and $76,000.

LaVale Board Holds Hearing On Rezoning

Only Two Members Hear Arguments

The two-man LaVale Zoning Board conducted a public hearing last night at the LaVale Fire Hall on an application to rezone 4,000 feet along the easterly side of Winchester Road from "rural residential" to "commercial A" but took the matter under advisement.

John L. Conway and John J. Rowan, the two remaining board members, conducted the hearing last night. Thomas W. Burton, who had been the chairman of the zoning board, submitted his resignation to the county commission-

Zimmer Will Revise Budget For College

Second Session Planned Thursday

A discussion of the proposed budget for Allegany Community College for the fiscal year starting July 1 featured a meeting of the County Board of Education, sitting yesterday afternoon as the Board of Trustees of the college. Dr. Robert S. Zimmer, president of the college, submitted a proposed budget based on an enrollment of the equivalent of 200 full-time students for the 1963-64 school year.

The president was advised by the Board of Trustees to revise his estimates on the basis of 130 full-time students and 150 parttime students for 1963-64.

The Board of Trustees will meet again at 7:30 p. m. Thursday at the college to consider Dr. Zimmer's revised budget for the college. It is anticipated that the total budget will be in the neighborhood of $160,000 and the county will be requested to provide somewhere between $70,000 and $76,000.
